

Radiologic Technologist

Career Highlight

Centre of Excellence
HEALTH

What is a Radiologic Technologist?

Radiologic Technologists (X-Ray Technologists) use X-rays and other imaging equipment to help doctors find injuries and diseases. They work with patients, operate specialized equipment, and make sure images are clear and safe to take.

Where do Radiologic Technologists work?

- Hospitals
- Medical clinics
- Research centers
- Medical equipment sales companies

What are the roles of Radiologic Technologists?

- Planning for and administering ionizing radiation to patients for diagnostic or therapeutic procedures
- Delivering education, advocacy, and application of radiation safety
- Assessing patients before, during, and after the application of radiologic technology
- Applying knowledge, skill, and judgement in the evaluation and interpretation of diagnostic images

Education Path

Saint John
School of Radiological Technology

The Moncton
Hospital
School of Radiologic
Technology

University of New Brunswick
(Saint John Campus)

Licensure and Certification

Must be actively registered and certified with the Canadian Association of Medical Radiation Technologists – New Brunswick Division and successfully completed the national association's exam.

Salary

- $39.74 per hour
- $77,493 per year

Registered Radiology Technologist in New Brunswick | Wages - Job Bank

Personal Characteristics

- Strong problem-solving and critical thinking skills
- Strong judgement and technical skill
- Ability to understand and emphasize the needs of the patient
- Strong communication and interpersonal skills
- Ability to adapt in difficult and/or stressful settings
- Ability to work independently as well as in a team environment

Thank you very much!

Centre of Excellence
HEALTH